Canmore Junior Idol sends 10 to Calgary

➤ The top 10 contestants in Canmore's first Idol competition at the Cornerstone Theatre will now get their compete with some of the province's best at the upcoming Calgary Idol competition.

The first ever Canmore Junior Idol competition finished Sunday, Oct. 24 at Cornerstone Theatre with the Top Ten contestants performing for a large and enthusiastic audience.

With performances in varying styles, the young contestants showcased the level of talent that exists in the Bow Valley.

All ten contestants will get to continue their pursuit of performance greatness in the upcoming Calgary Idol competition.

The event, a "huge success" according to organizers, was hosted by Martha McDiarmid and judged by Todd Svecla, from Hats Off Productions/Calgary Idol, Alana Clarke, singer/songwriter,

Ruth Purves-Smith, singer/songwriter, JP Thibodeau, artistic director and performer at Cornerstone Theatre.

The Top Ten were split into two age categories: those eight to 12 years old, and performers aged 13 through 17. There were five competitors in each group.

Samantha Bell, Mari Hill, Katyana Szabo, Alysse Ernewein and Emily Pomeroy made up the older bracket, in which a tie was recorded for top spot.

Pomeroy and Ernewein finished with the same number of points, a fact that had judges revisit their totals four times.

Along with cash prizes donated by local businesses, these ladies will get to perform as the opening act for Jill Barber at Communita Café as part of their grand prize package.

The eight- to 12-year old contestants were: Katie Reeder, Jasmine Allard, Jessica Martens, Emma Schneider and Tillie Heighinton.

Heighinton performed a version of "Fireflies" before being announced as the winner in her age category.

Organisers Anita Szabo and JP Thibodeau said it was the local sponsors, who donated prizes for the event, who made the event. And gave thanks to the donors of the cash grand prizes who stepped up when not one but two winners were announced for the 13-17 group.
